

Frigga Feetless tells the story about four musicians who met in the autumn in 2013, and got together to create and compose original music. Made up of three Danish musicians, and an Estonian singer, the band hopes to bring something unique and fresh to the music scene. Frigga gets inspiration from Jazz, Latin American Music, World Music, and Pop. Currently competing in the semifinals of the Danish Youth Jazz 2014 Competition, the band has established itself prominently in the Danish music scene.

Frigga Feetless is not a religious band, but it found inspiration for its name from the floating Nordic goddess of Frigg in the Norse mythology. Frigg was Odin's wife, and the one Odin sought when he needed advice. Frigg's name means "love" or "beloved one", which we found inspiring to symbolize our infinite love for music. The band members were also fascinated by music's ability to coalesce musicians and audience into one. As one entity, they then could experience being "feet-less", almost floating like a goddess, as they found refuge in the beauty of music. And so "Frigga Feetless" was born, symbolizing feelings that are often impossible to put into words.

Each musician in Frigga has something special about them. Estonian singer Karmen Rõivassepp possesses a distinct voice, with a keen knowledge of jazz harmonies and a strong ability to sing long advance lines. Being raised as a piano player, she is a skilful improviser who applies her classical and rhythmic training beautifully. Unlike other guitarists, Kristoffer Gori Verdoner is easily recognizable by his sound, voicing, and ideas. His unselfish nature brings out the best in each musician, while his purposeful spaces in songs allows the music to blossom in a captivating manner. With Anders Ammitzbøll playing the bass, Frigga is always in good hands as his perfect pitch gives him an astute awareness of music direction. Anders is not afraid of taking risks, and constantly challenges his band mates to push their limits, bringing the best music to the table each time. One Kristoffer is never enough in Denmark though, and Frigga is no exception. Our drummer Kristoffer Lysgaard displays an endless range of colours and dynamics in his art, with a keen ear for the layers in the rhythm. He is able to both control the beat knowledgeably and communicate the tempo well to his band mates, helping Frigga sync smoothly together.

Originating from different backgrounds, the artists work beautifully together, bringing music to a whole new level. Frigga sets out to perform newly written music each time, showcasing each musician's unique character through their improvisations in various songs. We aspire to give back to the music scene by sharing our innovative creations with others.

Join us as we embark on this exciting journey filled with passion and creativity, encompassed with the universal language of music.
